

The steep slope reduces expansion of the wave front, so the reduction in amplitude with distance is less than a spherical source.

Reflections from back wall reinforced the sound.

The spacing and materials used filtered out low frequency components of the speech that cause problems with intelligibility.

